About PARI
The Program of Accompanying Research for Agricultural Innovation (PARI) brings together partners from Africa, India and Germany to contribute to sustainable agricultural growth and food and nutrition security in Africa and India as part of the “One World, No Hunger” Initiative supported by the German government.

HOW TO USE

or directly via link: http://database.research4agrinnovation.org/

You can search the database by keywords or using different search criteria.

Search by keywords or use advanced search

THE DATABASE
Aim: document the most promising innovations in agriculture and the food sector that have the potential to be scaled up in tropical and sub-tropical countries in general and especially across the countries linked to PARI in Africa and India.

The Database includes technological, managerial and institutional innovations that

- could be applied along agricultural value chains
- have the potential to be scaled up
- have undergone an impact assessment

Target audience: research institutes, larger producers/companies, extension service and other intermediaries